

Dear FCC:

Don't relax restrictions on nudity and profanity on television. Just because the big networks are scared that they can't compete with HBO and Showtime doesn't mean you should chicken out and get out of the way for capitalism. And no, allowing the f-word on daytime TV doesn't allow for life or art or whatever to be represented well to our modern culture. Entertainment or communication without restraint is ludicrous and valueless. IT is in our cultural restraint that we are able to move forward as a nation.
